

Frequently Asked Questions -- Account Types

Last U

Q1: What types of investment accounts do you offer?

We offer the following investment account types:

- Non-Registered Investment Account: Flexible account with no contribution limits; investment income is taxable in the year earned.
- RRSP (Registered Retirement Savings Plan): Tax-deferred retirement savings; contributions are tax-deductible.
- TFSA (Tax-Free Savings Account): Investment income and withdrawals are tax-free; annual contribution limit set by CRA.
- RESP (Registered Education Savings Plan): Tax-sheltered education savings with government grants (CESG up to $500/year).
- RRIF (Registered Retirement Income Fund): Converted from RRSP; provides scheduled retirement income with mandatory minimum withdrawals.
- LIRA (Locked-In Retirement Account): Holds pension funds transferred from an employer pension plan; subject to provincial locking-in rules.

Q2: What is the 2025 TFSA contribution limit?

The 2025 TFSA annual contribution limit is $7,000. If you were 18 or older in 2009 and have been a Canadian resident since then, your cumulative contribution room is $102,000 (as of 2025). Unused contribution room carries forward. Withdrawals made in a previous year are added back to your contribution room on January 1 of the following year.

Q3: What is the RRSP contribution limit for 2025?

Your 2025 RRSP contribution limit is 18% of your 2024 earned income, up to a maximum of $32,490, minus any pension adjustment. Unused contribution room from prior years carries forward indefinitely. You can find your exact limit on your most recent CRA Notice of Assessment or by logging into your CRA My Account.

Q4: Can I hold U.S. investments in my registered accounts?

Yes. U.S. and international securities can be held in all registered account types. However, be aware of the following:

- RRSP/RRIF: U.S. dividends are exempt from the 15% U.S. withholding tax under the Canada-U.S. Tax Treaty.
- TFSA/RESP: U.S. dividends are subject to 15% U.S. withholding tax (the treaty exemption does not apply).
- Currency conversion fees apply when purchasing U.S. securities from a CAD account.

Consider opening a U.S. dollar registered account to avoid repeated currency conversions.

Q5: Can I have a joint investment account?

Joint non-registered investment accounts are available for two or more individuals. Registered accounts (RRSP, TFSA, RESP, RRIF, LIRA) cannot be held jointly -- they must be in a single individual's name. For joint accounts, both parties must complete the KYC questionnaire and agree on the investment mandate. Tax reporting is split based on each party's contribution to the account.

This FAQ is provided for general information only and does not constitute financial, tax, or legal advice. Product availability, fees, and terms are subject to change without notice. For personalized guidance, please consult your relationship manager.